Biography

As a child Brandon watched a documentary about spontaneous combustion; amazed by how flammable the human body can become Brandon vowed to never allow this to happen to himself. Years of dedication have permitted him to avoid this disastrous fate. He created a complex and tedious system involving counting numerous objects and repeat occurrences he encounters in his travels. Once a trampoline couch, Brandon attributes his fondness for unique points of view to the amount of time he spent flying through the air. When not working with images, Brandon amuse himself by creating tall tales usually involving dragons, princesses, and a super powered hero that has to overcome a terrible vice in order to save the day. As a small fish in a big pond Brandon is dedicated to working his craft and excited about working alongside like-minded friends to create distinct and witty images.

After completing his BFA in Image Arts at Ryerson University, Brandon began retouching and photographing products/advertisements for the John Bead Corporation. It was through these projects and working for other photographers that Brandon was able to move forward and work on projects he never imagined he would be a part of while flying through the air.
